三、閱讀測驗

The exact historical origins of the ice cream that young and old alike adore are shrouded in mystery. Before this popular dessert was invented, Marco Polo had returned from the Orient with a recipe for sherbet. Hundred of years earlier, the Roman emperor Nero had snow and ice rushed to Rome from the mountains by special teams of runners. He then flavored the ice with fruit juices. Ice creams like the modern variety were probably invented in Italy, where it quickly became an expensive treat for the very rich. King Charles I of England bragged of his secret recipe for ice cream; Henry II of France served a different flavor to his court each day for a month to mark his marriage. In America, Thomas Jefferson also bragged of his secret flavors. George Washington, according to a merchant's book, spent almost $200 on ice cream in 1790. And Dolly Madison served ice cream at her husband's Second Inaugural at the White House. It was pointedly evident that the cream was from the president's cows; the fruit, from the White House garden. Not until the nineteenth century, when insulated icehouses for keeping ice and hand-cranked ice-cream freezers were invented, were the lower classes able to afford ice cream.

36. What is the author's purpose in writing this passage?
- (A) To clarify a myth about ice cream flavors.
 - (B) To discuss the evolution of ice cream in America.
 - (C) To inform us about the history of ice cream.
 - (D) To provide reasons for the popularity of ice cream.
37. According to the passage, which of the following is NOT true?
- (A) Marco Polo brought the recipe for sherbet from the Orient.
 - (B) The Roman emperor Nero enjoyed ice and fruit juices.
 - (C) Henry II of France served ice cream to celebrate his marriage.
 - (D) The Italians are generally credited for creating the first sherbet.
38. What can be concluded from the passage?
- (A) Nero got his idea for ice and fruit juices from the Orient.
 - (B) Thomas Jefferson was a great fan of ice cream.
 - (C) Ice cream has lost its appeal in some European countries.
 - (D) England discovered ice cream earlier than the Italians.
39. The passage suggests that ____.
- (A) Dolly Madison could make ice creams better than anyone else
 - (B) after the lower classes could afford ice cream, the rich lost interest in the treat
 - (C) ice cream was introduced in America before it was known in England
 - (D) it wasn't until 1800 that ice cream was made available to the general public
40. As used in the passage, what does the word "evident" mean?
- (A) Incredible.
 - (B) Apparent.
 - (C) Perplexing.
 - (D) Speculated.

Weather seems to be the most important factor dictating the severity of forest fires. Hot, dry weather lowers the moisture content of fuel. Once a fire has started, wind would become influential concerning oxygen supply and the rate of spread. Other important factors include forest types and forest conditions. For example, fire is more likely to occur in conifers than in hardwoods; slash-covered or brushy areas are especially hazardous because the rate at which combustion consumes fuel is related to fuel volume or surface area.

Some fires are caused by lightening; others are caused by people. Those caused by people may be accidental or intentional. Regional differences exist regarding the causes of fire. For example, fires in Rocky Mountains present a different picture from the fires in the South. 70 percent of the fires in the former area are caused by lightening, whereas intentional fires take up to 40 percent in the later.

36. What is the main topic of the passage?
- (A) How to reduce the chance of forest fires
- (B) Ways to differentiate types of forest fires
- (C) Discuss the conditions of forest fires
- (D) How to utilize weather information to predict the possibility of forest fires

37. It can be concluded from this passage that

Nathaniel Hawthorne (1804-1864), one of America's all-time major authors, had many disappointments in his literary career. Being of a melancholy nature, he was 26 to become gloomy about his future as a writer. Pessimism was Hawthorne's bitterest foe. Three different times in his life Hawthorne had to give up writing as a livelihood and take a government job. At such times he had not been 27 his understanding wife Sophia he might very possibly have abandoned literature altogether.

On one especially discouraging occasion, Hawthorne returned home with the announcement that he had just lost his government position. "What will we do now, Sophia?" he sighed in 28. "This is the end." American literature is beholden 29 Sophia for what happened next. Instead of 30 her husband for losing his job, she went to the cupboard, took down pen, ink, and paper, and placed them on the table. Then, caressing her husband affectionately, she smiled and said, "Just think of it! Now you'll be completely free to write that book you've had in mind and couldn't find time for."

Sophia's positive attitude caused Hawthorne to master up enough courage to sit down at the table and begin work. The result was The Scarlet Letter, Hawthorne's finest novel and one of the most valuable contributions to American literature.

Biofuels are a wide range of fuels which are in some way derived from biomass. The term covers solid biomass, liquid fuels and various biogases. With the recent rise in oil prices, along with growing concern about global warming caused by carbon dioxide emissions, biofuels are gaining increased public and scientific attention.

One type of biofuel, blended with much of the gasoline in the United States, is called bioethanol. It is the same stuff as in alcoholic drinks, except that it's made from corn that has been heavily processed. There are various ways of making biofuels, but they generally use chemical reactions, fermentation, and heat to break down the starches, sugars, and other small particles in plants.

On the face of it, biofuels look like a great solution. Unlike underground oil reserves, biofuels are a renewable resource since we can always grow more crops to turn into fuel. Unfortunately, it's not so simple. The process of growing the crops, making fertilizers and pesticides, and processing the plants into fuel consumes a lot of energy. It's so much energy that there is debate about whether ethanol from corn actually provides more energy than is required to grow and process it. Also, because much of the energy used in production comes from coal and natural gas, biofuels don't replace as much oil as they use.

36. What is the passage mainly about?
- (A) Biofuels can increase crops production in the United States.
 - (B) Biofuels made from corns and other crops are called bioethanol.
 - (C) Biofuels may also lead to global warming and climate change.
 - (D) Biofuels have drawn increased attention in spite of their limitations.
37. According to the passage, which of the following is NOT true about biofuels?
- (A) They gain popularity because of the rise of oil prices.
 - (B) They only cover gases that are made from plants.
 - (C) They can be made through a variety of methods.
 - (D) They still rely on other types of fuels during the production.
38. Which of the following processes is most similar to the process of making bioethanol?
- (A) Making wine from grapes
 - (B) Making coffee tables out of logs
 - (C) Making sweet bean soup
 - (D) Making leather sandals
39. According to the passage, what is the primary disadvantage of biofuels?
- (A) They are a renewable resource.
 - (B) They consume a lot of energy during the production.
 - (C) They can replace a large amount of oil consumption.
 - (D) The process of making them is too complicated.
40. What does the word “pesticides” mean in the passage?
- (A) Parts of plants that can produce biofuels.
 - (B) Different gases used to produce biofuels.
 - (C) Chemicals used to kill insects that damage crops.
 - (D) Substance added to soil to help the growth of crops.

Today, when we want new clothes, we can go to a clothing store and buy whatever you like. But for people two or three hundred years ago, getting new clothes was not so easy. Not only did they make their own clothing, but sometimes people wove their own cloth at home. And if they owned their own sheep, they even spun the wool into yarn themselves.

Wool cannot just be taken from the sheep and spun. First, it must be cleaned and then carded. In a large family, carding was usually the children's job, because it is easy but tiresome. Carding is done with two wide combs that have rows of steel teeth. The person carding puts a piece of wool on one comb, then pulls the other comb across the wool again and again. This combing makes the wool fibers straight and smooth so they can be spun.

Finally, the mother or older sister of the family could use the wool for spinning. Spinning just means twisting and stretching the fibers into yarn. You have spun yarn if you have ever pulled and twisted a cotton ball into a long string. Usually, though, a spinning wheel helps make the pulling and twisting easier. The spinner holds the wool in her hands and twists one end onto the yarn already on the spindle, or long winding stick. The spinning wheel turns the spindle, pulling the wool into yarn and winding it onto the spindle at the same time. Finally, the yarn is ready for weaving.

Today, machines can spin yarn much faster than people can. But in some places, people still make their own yarn because they love the old art of spinning.

四、閱讀測驗

Much of the theory of manners was formulated by the sociologist Norbert Elias in his book, The Civilizing Process. Elias notes that medieval culture initially gave powerful men the ability to act like children—to live without any physical or psychic restraints. Over a span of several centuries, beginning in the 11th or 12th and maturing in the 17th and 18th, Europeans increasingly inhibited their impulses, anticipated the long-term consequences of their actions, and took other people's thoughts and feelings into consideration. A culture of honor—the readiness to take revenge—gave way to a culture of dignity—the readiness to control one's emotions.

In the 16th century, the great Erasmus penned the first etiquette book—The Handbook of Good Manners for Children. Several other writers also published similar guidebooks. The books included such rules as: Don't urinate in the hallway; don't use the tablecloth to blow your nose; don't use your personal knife to pop food into your mouth, etc. Interestingly, those rules had less to do with good hygiene than we might imagine. An understanding of microbes and infection did not arrive until well into the 19th century. The only explicit rationales stated in those books are to avoid acting like an animal and to avoid offending others.

This civilizing process was long and slow. King David I of Scotland proposed that citizens who learned to eat more properly should get a tax refund. Disappointingly, that idea never caught on. The much-traveled Thomas Coryat introduced the table fork to Britain. When he returned from Italy in 1608 with this fancy novelty, he met with a torrent of ridicule. But that idea did eventually catch on. And a quarter of a century later, the table fork reached America.

36. Which statement in the following best expresses the main point of the passage?
- (A) Erasmus was extremely disappointed with people's ill manners.

These days, food safety has become a big issue and a major public concern. People are worried about the overuse of chemicals on plants and livestock. Because of increasing health awareness, the number of people switching from traditional food to organic food is on the rise.

It is usually thought that chemicals used on plants and animals are harmful for a person's health. Unlike traditional farms, organic farmers use natural methods to control insects and diseases on their agriculture. Animals like pigs and chickens on organic farms are kept in open spaces so that they may walk around and therefore be better cared for. In addition, they are not fed the type of medicine that helps them grow or recover from illness very quickly. Fruits and vegetables are also planted in such a way where only natural substances are used to make them grow well.

Supporters claim several advantages in choosing organic food, such as no chemicals, eco-friendliness, high nutritional values, and better taste. On the other hand, opponents note the disadvantages of organic food. First, organic food is usually more expensive than non-organic food. Second, organic food is produced using no artificial preservatives, and as such it may go bad more quickly. Third, it is not easy to find organic food at every store. Finally, some studies have questioned whether organic food is truly more nutritious than traditional food.

Is it really good and safe to eat organic food? The answer may depend upon one's personal choice.

36. What is the passage mainly about?
- (A) The origin of organic food including its prices in various stores.
 - (B) The purpose of having organic food including how to cook.
 - (C) The types and numbers of organic products including where to purchase them.
 - (D) The introduction of organic food, including its growing processes and pros and cons.
37. What can be inferred from paragraph 2?
- (A) Organic farmers do not use chemicals.
 - (B) Fruits and vegetables planted on traditional farms are healthier.
 - (C) Organic food grows well and is more appealing to customers.
 - (D) Animals and plants raised on organic farms are free from diseases.
38. Which of the following statements regarding organic food is correct?
- (A) Organic food can be bought nearly everywhere.
 - (B) People prefer organic food mainly because of environmental concern.
 - (C) Organic food is less expensive but more nutritious.
 - (D) Organic food cannot be kept for a long time.
39. The word "opponents" in paragraph 3 refers to ____.

四、閱讀測驗

There's a fun game I like to play in a group of trusted friends called "Controversial Opinion". The rules are simple: Don't talk about what was shared during Controversial Opinion afterward and you aren't allowed to "argue"—only to ask questions about why that person feels that way. Opinions can range from "I think James Bond movies are overrated" to "I think Donald Trump would make an excellent president". Usually, someone responds to an opinion with, "Oh my god! I had no idea you were one of those people!" Which is really another way of saying "I thought you were on my team!" In psychology, the idea that everyone is like us is called the "false-consensus bias". This bias often manifests itself when we see in politics or polls.

Online it means we can be blindsided by the opinions of our friends. Over time, this morphs into a subconscious belief that we and our friends are the sane ones and that there's a crazy "Other Side" that must be laughed at—an Other Side that just doesn't "get it", and is clearly not as intelligent as "us". But this holier-than-thou social media behavior is counterproductive, it's self-aggrandizement at the cost of actual nuanced discourse and if we want to consider online discourse productive, we need to move past this.

What is emerging is the worst kind of echo chamber, one where those inside are increasingly convinced that everyone shares their world view, that their ranks are growing when they aren't. It's like clockwork: an event happens and then your social media circle is shocked when a non-social media peer group public reacts to news in an unexpected way. They then mock the Other Side for being "out of touch" or "dumb".

36. What is the main idea of this article?
- (A) Playing Controversial Opinion with trusted friends is simple and fun.
 - (B) To have a constructive discussion, we need to talk to "the other side".
 - (C) Having "false-consensus bias" is common among friends.
 - (D) We should defend ourselves when others disagree with us.
37. What can you do when playing Controversial Opinion?
- (A) Defend your opinions.
 - (B) Judge your friends' opinions.
 - (C) Ask your friends why they feel the way they do.
 - (D) Defend your friends' opinions.
38. What does it mean to have a holier-than-thou social media behavior?
- (A) Listen to others' opinions without being judgmental.
 - (B) Interact only with people in your social echo chamber.
 - (C) Being condescending when listening to others' opinions.
 - (D) Try to reach a common ground when debating with people online.
39. What is likely to happen in an echo chamber on social media?
- (A) People would believe that they may be misguided by misinformation on social media.
 - (B) People believe that everyone shares a common view toward the world.
 - (C) People are ready to talk to others who hold a different view from their own.
 - (D) People remain skeptical about online information.
40. What does it mean to be blindsided by the opinions of our friends?
- (A) Defending our friends' opinions forcefully.
 - (B) Not paying attention to our friends' opinions.
 - (C) Adopting our friends' opinions without independent and critical thinking.
 - (D) Trying to persuade our friends to adopt our opinions.

Recent biological research indicates that there is a biochemical basis to love, which explains why people in love feel as if they were in a more beautiful world. Psychologists such as Dr. Elaine Hatfield, Robert Sternberg and Zick Rubin posit that love consists of three or more stages. The three main stages are lust, attraction, and attachment, while some of the other stages are intimacy, trust, and jealousy. Each stage is ruled or initiated by specific hormonal controllers. In their studies, every love passes through some of these stages and occurs due to the mediation of certain molecules in these specific chemical controllers.

Biological research has shown that the hormones dominant in the different phases include testosterone and estrogen (the sexual hormones); dopamine, norepinephrine and serotonin (these are the “pleasure chemicals” - the hormones invoking feelings of pleasure and excitement); and oxytocin (the “cuddle chemical” - the hormone producing feelings of attachment to another person). For example, in the second phase of attraction, when people have the feeling of being in love, the little molecule phenylethylamine (known as PEA), controlling the love chemicals dopamine and norepinephrine, can cause feelings of elation, exhilaration and euphoria. People feel excited and fulfilled.

Additionally, biological anthropologist Helen Fisher, an expert on romantic love, discusses what happens in the brain when people are in love and proposes that there is a dramatic increase in the amount of dopamine and norepinephrine present in the brain when one first becomes infatuated with another person.

36. What is the passage mainly about?
(A) Variations of love (B) Love in different cultures
(C) Chemistry of love (D) Psychological effects of love
37. According to the researchers, which of the following chemicals is most closely related to the feeling of being in love?
(A) testosterone (B) oxytocin (C) estrogen (D) dopamine
38. Which of the following is closest in meaning to the word “attachment”?
(A) assistance (B) concentration (C) connection (D) enclosure
39. According to the scientists, which of the following about how love occurs is NOT true?
(A) Every love passes through three or more stages - lust, attraction, attachment, etc.
(B) PEA is a hormone our bodies produce that promotes mutual feelings of connection and bonding.
(C) There is an increase in the amount of dopamine present in the brain when people are in love.
(D) People’s brains are influenced by hormones and chemicals that cause them to feel the way they feel.
40. What does the passage imply about love?
(A) Most people are not controlled by love.
(B) Science may help explain how love takes place.
(C) Love can be expressed precisely by words or actions.
(D) People can easily find the right person everywhere.

For a long time, many psychologists embraced a victim narrative about trauma, believing that severe stress causes long-lasting and perhaps irreparable damage to one's psyche and health. In 1980, post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) was added to the list of mental disorders and has since received a lot of attention in the media and among ordinary individuals trying to understand what happens to people in the wake of tragic life events. Yet psychologists now know that only a small percentage of people develop the full-blown disorder while, on average, anywhere from one half to two-thirds of trauma survivors exhibit what's known as post-traumatic growth. After a crisis, most people acquire a newfound sense of purpose, develop deeper relationships, have a greater appreciation of life, and report other benefits.

In American culture, when people are feeling depressed or anxious, they are often advised to do what makes them happy; they are encouraged to distract themselves from bad news and difficult feelings, to limit their time on social media and to exercise. However, the happy feelings one gets by doing pleasant things fade fast, and soon the sad mood takes over, plunging one into a deeper abyss of melancholy. A better strategy to cope with trauma has to do with meaning-seeking. When people search for meaning, they often do not feel happy, because the things that make our lives meaningful, like volunteering or working, are stressful and require effort. But months later, the meaning seekers not only reported fewer negative moods but also felt more enriched, inspired and part of something greater than themselves. Therefore, although none of us can avoid suffering, we can still learn to suffer well.

36. What is this passage mainly about?
(A) PTSD as a widespread mental disorder. (B) A good way to deal with trauma.
(C) How to find happiness in life. (D) Suffering as a meaning of life.
37. Which of the following statements is true about the first paragraph?
(A) Stress inevitably causes permanent damage to one's mind and body.
(B) PTSD should have been listed earlier as one of the mental disorders.
(C) Most people are able to survive and grow from a traumatic experience.
(D) The more serious one's crisis is, the more growth one can exhibit.
38. According to the second paragraph, which of the following options can best help one to recover from a traumatic experience?
(A) To do something cheerful as distraction.
(B) To find meaning in the unhappy experience.
(C) To seek help from a professional psychologist.
(D) To eat well, exercise well, and sleep well.
39. Which of the following is closest in meaning to the phrase in the wake of in the first paragraph?
(A) before (B) after (C) conscious of (D) suffering from
40. Which of the following has the least to do with post-traumatic growth?
(A) To awaken to the futility of all struggles. (B) To discover new sense of purpose in life.
(C) To appreciate the meaning of life better. (D) To develop a closer bond with loved ones.

Ocean waves represent our planet's last untapped large-scale renewable energy resource. Over 70 % of the earth's surface is covered with water. The energy contained within waves has the potential to produce up to 80,000 TWh (10^{12} watt-hours) of electricity per year—sufficient to meet our global energy demand five times over.

No wonder the idea of extracting energy from ocean waves and turning it into electricity is an alluring one. The first serious attempt to do so dates back to 1974, when Stephen Salter of Edinburgh University came up with the idea of “ducks”: house-sized buoys tethered to the sea floor that would convert the swell into rotational motion to drive generators. It failed, as have many subsequent efforts to perform the trick. But the idea of wave power will not go away, and the latest attempt—the brainchild of researchers at Oscilla Power, a firm based in Seattle—is trying to address head-on the reason why previous efforts have foundered.

This reason, according to Rahul Shendure, the firm's boss, is that those efforts took technologies developed for landlubbers (often as components of wind turbines) and tried to modify them for marine use. The consequence was kit too complicated and sensitive for the rough-and-tumble of life on the ocean waves, and also too vulnerable to corrosion. Better, he reckons, to start from scratch.

Instead of generators with lots of moving parts, Oscilla is developing ones that barely move at all. These employ a little-explored phenomenon called magnetostriction, in which ferromagnetic materials (things like iron, which can be magnetized strongly) change their shape slightly in the presence of a magnetic field. Like many physical processes, this also works in reverse. Apply stresses or strains to such a material and its magnetic characteristics alter. Do this in the presence of permanent magnets and a coil of wire, such as are found in conventional generators, and it will generate electricity.

36. What are NOT true about ocean waves?
- (A) They can be turned into electricity.
 - (B) Stephen Salter successfully used “ducks” to convert them into electricity.
 - (C) There have been attempts to convert them into electricity.
 - (D) Oscilla Power is one of the firms to convert them into electricity.
37. What is true about Oscilla Power?
- (A) It is based in Seattle.
 - (B) Its boss is Stephen Salter.
 - (C) It adopts a similar approach to other previous efforts.
 - (D) It copies some of the previous designs.
38. What are true about Oscilla's generators?
- (A) They have many moving parts.
 - (B) They move along with the waves.
 - (C) They do not have coils of wire.
 - (D) The phenomenon magnetostriction is employed.
39. What are the advantages of ocean wave energy?
- (A) It's easily available. (B) It's easily tapped. (C) It's renewable. (D) It can be recycled.
40. Why had the previous ocean wave energy conversion efforts failed?
- (A) Because they all relied on buoys.
 - (B) Because they were vulnerable to corrosion.
 - (C) Because they were not modified for marine use.
 - (D) Because they were not tethered to the sea floor.

The Great Migration is the largest herd movement of animals on the planet. The numbers are astonishing: over 1.5 million wildebeests, zebras, and antelopes move in a constant cycle through the Serengeti-Mara ecosystem in search of nutritious grass and water. Guided by survival instinct, each wildebeest will cover 800 to 1,000 km on its individual journey along age-old migration routes. Hungry predators, including lions, leopards, cheetahs, hyenas, wild dogs, and crocodiles, ensure the strongest survive in this natural spectacle. This is also known as ‘the greatest show on Earth.’

The animals travel from the Ngorongoro Conservation Area in southern Serengeti, Tanzania, through the Serengeti, into the Masai Mara in Kenya, and then back again. The journey is beset with danger: young calves are snatched by predators, the slow ones are brought down by prides of lion, brave beasts break legs on steep river slopes, crocodiles take their share of the stragglers, and the weak and exhausted drown.

As for the three major animals of the migrant grazers, they have different grass-eating habits: as one group eats the top of the tallest grass, the next group will eat away some of the medium-height grass until finally it is almost completely eaten, and the herds move on. This means each group sticks to its kind with only a tiny overlap in their distributions. The grasses of the plains have the highest protein content throughout the Serengeti and are also high in calcium.

It is unclear how the wildebeests know which way to go. However, it is generally believed that their journey is dictated primarily by their response to the weather. They probably follow the rains and new grass growth. Some experts believe the animals react to lightning and thunderstorms in the distance. It has even been suggested that wildebeest can locate rain more than 50 km away.

36. What is the main purpose of this article?

- (A) It mainly introduces African wildlife that can move freely on the vast rolling plains of the Serengeti.
- (B) It mainly indicates the solutions to the problem of some roads crossing the path of the Great Migration.
- (C) It mainly describes the ever-moving circular migration of over a million animals across the Serengeti-Mara ecosystem.
- (D) It mainly shows that the Great Migration is slowly collapsing due to widespread habitat loss.

37. According to this article, why can the wildebeests know their routes in the Great Migration?

- (A) They tend to choose the routes away from hungry predators.
- (B) They rely on their reaction to the earth’s magnetic fields.
- (C) They can find cut shorts to return to Tanzania.
- (D) They can detect rain more than 50 km away.

38. Which of the following is closest in meaning to the word “dictated” in Paragraph 4?

AI has the potential to significantly reduce teacher workloads and enhance student learning; however, schools require more explicit guidance on its safe and ethical implementation. An education inspection report on artificial intelligence indicates that even though teachers are using it to plan lessons and draft letters to parents, they have also expressed concerns that AI could negatively impact students' skills, with some worried about plagiarism and the inappropriate use of the technology. The local government, besides, maintains that it is important to balance the effective use of AI with the safety and wellbeing of students and staff.

Overall, the report has found that most schools observed are in the initial phases of investigating AI's benefits, with limited trials being carried out by digitally skilled and motivated staff members. In most cases, the implementation of AI lacks consistency, with notable differences in usage across individuals, educational levels, and departments. It states that while many staff members are enthusiastic about AI's potential, they are also cautious about its use, often voicing concerns about possible problems like inaccuracy, bias, and risks related to data protection.

The report also notes that the use of AI for drafting letters and project materials has significantly alleviated administrative burdens in some schools; moreover, teachers admitted that AI could be effective for tailoring resources to individual students, particularly those with additional needs. It concludes that the implementation of a coherent national strategy is imperative to ensure data security, optimize the use of artificial intelligence in supporting teaching, and mitigate the associated risks and challenges.

36. What has this education inspection report found about how AI is being adopted in schools?
- (A) All schools had strict AI policies in place.
 - (B) AI use was fully standardized across all departments.
 - (C) Most schools were still in the early stages, with varied and informal use.
 - (D) Most teachers refused to try AI.
37. Which concern is not explicitly mentioned as raised by teachers?
- (A) AI may negatively impact students' skill development.
 - (B) AI may lead to unemployment among teaching staff.
 - (C) There are risks related to plagiarism when using AI.
 - (D) Students might misuse AI tools inappropriately.
38. What can be inferred about students with additional needs?
- (A) They gain no advantage from using AI in the classroom.
 - (B) They may benefit more from personalized learning tools.
 - (C) Teachers do not know how to support them.
 - (D) AI is less useful for them than for other students.
39. Which of the following best summarizes the overall tone of the report regarding AI in schools?
- (A) Neutral, with no clear stance on AI use.
 - (B) Overwhelmingly optimistic about AI's future in education.
 - (C) Strongly opposed to any use of AI.
 - (D) Cautiously supportive, recognizing both opportunities and risks.
40. Which of the following most accurately captures the main challenge schools encounter in adopting AI?
- (A) Lack of interest and motivation among teachers and staff.
 - (B) Unclear guidance on safe and ethical use of AI.
 - (C) Technical difficulties with AI software.
 - (D) High costs of implementing AI tools.
